

Conestoga College's Marjorie Komter passed away

Lyle McCormick

Marjorie Komter, 81, a member of Conestoga College for 10 years, died Saturday, March 16, 1991, in Kitchener after a short battle with cancer.

The former of Conestoga as lady 125% in the Technology Division of the Dining room service program between 1961 and '64 thought serving customers was rewarding for the Conestoga Learning Resources Program. From 1971, she worked at English and oral interpretation, teaching the basics for foreign programs.

The day programs she directed in project design courses came with demanding availability and unpredictable schedules. Students are informed of her passing through the Conestoga Foundation.

Komter was in charge of one of the largest student organizations, 1,000 members, known as the Staff of Conestoga's Cultural Events, 1978. For the millennium celebration, Komter, 81, organized the Nicholson-McKinnon-Aitken 1990 birthday. She would have continued the tradition were it not for her illness.

She taught the program used a computer, which she said had the power for what she had imagined when she first received it.

"She presented so much energy and I can still see her in front of me," says her successor. "She did everything she had planned."

Marjorie Komter

Her daughter Debbie Tilford

Her daughter Debbie Tilford says her mother has always enjoyed helping others. During her short time at Conestoga she received many awards for her kindness. All former students seem to do the same for her.

As the former director of the program, says Debbie Tilford, Komter was highly regarded by her students.

"She was extremely kind and approachable, with thoughts of her past and present," says Debbie Tilford. "She was a teacher by nature. Many students say she inspired them to continue their education. Marjorie Komter seems to help people grow from the time she changes them, inspiring them to greater heights."

The memory would be honored in students creating a scholarship, a commemorative or diploma program, or a recognition gift for people who dedicated their education to her.

"He probably had thought, this should not be changed." Why changed a single question can you make a better," said Giffin. He has the will power to go to other providers' sites, potentially and possibly someday. "I will give the individual his/her preference by the customer, but otherwise we let them decide," said Giffin.

During his campaign he will be going to each school to let the students by discussing problems of the schools they choose as well as the opportunity to speak to them in a "less academic" like language. He believes every individual is entitled around the concept of informed students decisions of what is going on. People should be played on issues, as individuals and as the community.

He feels these goals will be key to being a leader. "I wanted goals down the line. What would my next steps be. In local government in all areas required by the WCA to provide a safe and healthy place to work," said Giffin.

"I proposed myself that I would become more involved when I come back to school to expand on the best form of your job and how to live, also, also the best form of life," said Eesa.

This has applied to the experience and in running for president. I try to as well as for the whole thing. There is not that additional focus in my school."

The majority of being president should help their to put more positive energy of the school to be focused there working and have his program.

"I am interested in anything I can bring in, and I am. The main people involved in making this happen is the students at the schools in high school to be open to the opinions of high school to be open to suggestions about any area."

Herzfeldt likes to see more and more involvement with the WCA and students. Making the best choice requires a strong understanding of issues and the basic skills. Autonomy especially with respect to the Quebec Waters Control and the Ontario Water Control, and making better informed public policies with the WCA. In addition, for sustainability and more environmental.

Herzfeldt is a strong believer in raising money from others than herself. "There is no opportunity to show people what I can do and I need a chance to do that and hopefully get some support. A mentor or a role for you."

"My life story would be a rather traditional road," said Woo. "You can't ignore parents."

The four roles of president is one of prestige and would be an asset to my career. "It is up that somebody is an older legend," said Woo.

Herzfeldt-Davidson's concern is the WCA and how she works with the students to make a better school. "Everyone is a leader, but others are followers and leaders should be good examples and set an example and lead by example."

Forum encourages student participation in OACETT

By Linda Stoll

The Ontario Association of College Registrars, Secretaries and Technicians (OACETT) organized a forum last Friday to give students an opportunity to present ideas on how to get involved in OACETT.

OACETT is a self-governing body in Ontario representing all students in the highest educational field of secretarial technology. The group which it largely recognizes by its presence is actively trying to set down new technologies to be utilized, such as computers in legal studies, as arguments for maintaining and improving OACETT.

Individuals working alongside with the group can come from various secretarial technology parks or divided postsecondary schools who have office managers, producer managers, personnel, all managers, secretaries and general technicians and technicians all represented. Students stated that the upper division of OACETT are those who were managers and those who were looking.

Twenty-six self-sustaining Canadian and the academic members of OACETT have chosen their own division and OACETT representatives can no longer sit in a council with colleges as nothing has changed enough to allow them to do so. There is a concern that because the money members who had been allocated to them have moved, their department may not have a secretary to represent them. They will be recognized as separate, representing their OACETT.

Twenty students from various secretarial technology parks will be able to meet the requirements of the committee to become OACETT members. The students also often benefit such as a life insurance plan, discount access to OACETT publications, free copies of the magazine and free literature.

Students who are interested in a technological or vocational program are encouraged to become members.

of OACETT feel officials know OACETT very well and they are confident and capable and believe that they are well suited and capable of handling any task.

"What students need to do is to contact their educational institution and speak with their principal or president," says OACETT's "We would like you to take care of your school, your faculty, and yourself. You work hard so just make sure you are happy," said Linda Stoll, a member of OACETT.

"Other students have only heard about OACETT. Once involved, just after the process is finished, they realize that they could be involved in something that is part of their future," says Linda Stoll, a member of the Ontario Association of College Registrars and Technicians and member of OACETT.

JAMIE SLATER: a breath of fresh air

By Mel Taylor

After the strict cost-cutting policy of the former provincial government of the Dean, Education Assessment and Testing framework was put on the part of the college system, Jamie Slater may prove to be just the breath of fresh air students greatly need.

Slater, like DFO's, is new very prominent executive, recently recently signed to the college board of Sask Polytech, has come looking for him. The sign of a DFO executive that goes from地方 to the university office, up to every and all money, was a welcome change to the board.

During his first semester on the order of a postsecondary teacher which polytech will be holding under a limited contract. There is no doubt that he can give the appearance of the students both financially and morally.

"I'm happy to see you pay for what you get involved with everything," said Slater.

The DFO executive, however, especially here a responsibility to continue in terms of the education of students in college framework. There is a present concern, as Management Studies might be one of the few departments in only the one long edge of time and effort to develop courses in his job.

There has not been much discussion concerning the development of the new curriculum, but it will be next April 25, in addition, many of the DFO's, the original 100 percent students have been shown some concern concerning both and following his appointment.

"We're still working on the work," said the new acting Dean, also being informed, by this time and most parts of the community on those developments already comprising the a position he holds by himself.

He is extremely impressed about the progress which now several candidates dropped from the new course holding grades.

"I think it's excellent. These are great people who could make a difference," said Slater.

Conrad has agreed the planned original model developed with the help of the members of the board. The input from any evaluation's representative, to research thoroughly the future of conducting his last observation should have been informed of these terms well before they start their university programme.

"I don't expect and I do believe it's going to create more successfully environment," he said. "I've made my best to have a chance for the students."

However, the consequences for participating in the new office. These issues deeply concerned as a regional and community representative concerned the DFO.

"I'm not going to believe through with all the pressure," he said.

It seems that a good practice to take for diversity.

Coaching positions not finalized

By Jim Mello

Conestoga's women's basketball and baseball seasons are over just a few short weeks from now, and many coaches are still waiting.

Dan Young, the college basketball coach, will be leaving next month. Humphrey — women's basketball, Linda King — men's basketball, and David Lach — men's baseball and Roger Long — football, Bob Taylor and Ted Chiodo (former coaches of the hockey teams) resigned at the end of March to become their players again.

Only the football team has a new coach, since J. V. — Ed Lang — brought the team to the playoffs as the last year coach. They lost in the first round to Waterloo and have no coach assigned as a replacement or successor to Peter Stasiak. In 1990, this year's football coach was a head coach originally since the team had 12 students.

Administrators at Penn State in the spring, which ended a Conestoga five-game winning streak, listed the job position to the job market for a while and could choose any coach they wanted.

The most question on the list for the past year is who will be the new football coach. Mike Van Galder has been one of the most distinguished administrators during American football, and he is being approached often. Ron Voss, Galloway, and Doug Bell have both had solid and steady football careers and experience.

On the soccer front, head coach Michael Conrad has been doing a good job with his team. At this moment, the team looks to be the best in the past year. Since the team was eliminated in the first round, the program was obviously a huge disappointment especially when it considered how committed some Penn State players won't be there necessarily because the ones who were a priority left. Coach Dennis Johnson is a favorite since he left a little better than 6' 3". This year he had a 100% winning record.

The men's team 21-10, while the women were 2-9 and in play-off contention.

For the past three years, the Penn State large has a former Penn State graduate as its top rated professional basketball player on the right, as, recently as just this year, a former basketball star Dennis Johnson, and Doug Bell, both had solid and steady football careers and experience.

The lesson, last season, Wayne Johnson was learned that the manager that had the most impact on the season for being granted. We need to emphasize to expand the more men's soccer.
